8 THINGS TO KNOW

‘Avengers: Endgame’ movie directors plead: ‘Don’t spoil it’

Short, grainy clips were leaked on Reddit, YouTube and other platforms.

MARVEL STUDIOS

The directors of “Avengers: Endgame” pleaded with fans on Tuesday not to spoil the movie by giving away story lines after reports that some scenes had leaked online.

In an open letter posted on Twitter under the hashtag #DontSpoilTheEndgame, Joe and Anthony Russo said they and the vast cast of the upcoming Marvel superhero movie “have worked tirelessly for the last three years with the sole intention of delivering a surprising and emotionally powerful conclusion” to the saga.

“When you see Endgame in coming weeks, please don't spoil it for others, the same way you wouldn't want it spoiled for you,” they added.

Walt Disney's “Avengers: Endgame” marks the conclusion of a story told across 22 Marvel films. The plot has been shrouded in secrecy, with no advance screenings for the entertainment press. Sales of advance tickets earlier this month surpassed those of 2015 movie “Star Wars: The Force Awakens.”

The film, which brings together multiple comic-book characters, starts its rollout on April 24 in Australia and China before arriving in the United States on April 25.

Some fans said on Tuesday they had seen brief, grainy scenes on Reddit, YouTube and other platforms, but the footage was swiftly removed. Reuters has not seen the leaked scenes and Disney declined to comment.

The #DontSpoilTheEndgame hashtag was one of the top Twitter trends on Tuesday. Some fans who said they had viewed the leaks said they only increased their anticipation for the movie.

“I was upset for about 0.2 seconds then realized how cool it was and it made me so hyped,” a person with the user name thestaggie posted on Reddit.

Chris Smith, a contributor to the BGR.com entertainment and tech news site, wrote that he had seen a leak but that it “doesn't really give away the ending” of the movie, although it contained scenes that had not been shown in any of the trailers or official clips released so far.

“I don't consider that the leak has actually ruined the movie for me. It just makes me want to watch it even more than I already did,” wrote Smith. REUTERS

Columbine, other Colorado schools under security alert

2 Authorities in Colorado placed Columbine High School and more than 20 surrounding public schools under a “lockout” security alert on Tuesday, citing the investigation of an unspecified “credible threat.” The alert came four days before the 20th anniversary of the April 1999 massacre at Columbine, when two heavily armed students stormed the suburban Denver high school and fatally shot 12 classmates and a teacher before committing suicide. Tuesday's lockout, less serious than a public safety “lockdown,” means that activities inside the schools may continue as usual but entry and exit is restricted, the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office said on Twitter. Officers were “investigating what appears to be a credible threat possibly involving the schools,” the sheriff's department said on Twitter, adding that students were safe and additional deputies were dispatched to the schools. Reality TV now has its own fan convention

3 From gossipy housewives to lovelorn bachelors and lip-syncing drag queens, reality television is getting its own fan event. Youth channel MTV on Tuesday announced it would host the first reality television convention, where fans and some of the people made famous by shows like “Jersey Shore,” “The Real Housewives” and “The Bachelor” will come together to celebrate the genre. MTV, whose “The Real World” is credited with launching the modern trend for reality television in 1992, said that the RealityCon event would take place in the summer of 2020. It will feature performances, interviews and discussions with stars and producers behind some of reality television's most popular series across TV networks, including “Survivor,” “Big Brother,” “The Hills” and “RuPaul's Drag Race.” MTV said it would announce dates and more details about RealityCon at a later stage. Several injured in multiple crashes in Philly Tuesday

Two crashes in Philadelphia left multiple people injured on Tuesday afternoon.

Ten people were injured after several cars crashed into a SEPTA bus in Mayfair on Tuesday at about 1:30 p.m., when two vehicles collided with a SEPTA Route 14 bus near Bustleton Avenue and Devereaux Avenue.

One vehicle was an SUV, and the other was a non-SEPTA Paratransit vehicle, according to ABC Philly.

Bus passengers and the drivers of both cars were injured during the crash, according to the Philly Patch.

CBS Philly reported that seven passengers from the SEPTA bus, two people from inside the Honda CRV and a passenger from the paratransit van were all taken to a nearby hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The bus was reportedly stopped while passengers were getting on and off at a stop. Vehicles were totalled in the crash, and one flipped over as a result of the impact. The cause of the crash was still under investigation.

Meanwhile, a second crash toppled two people "like bowling pins" just before 4 p.m. in North Philadelphia, according to CBS Philly. The incident occurred at 16th Street and Lehigh Avenue. CBS Philly reported that the victims were transported to Temple and Hahnemann hospitals with unknown conditions. This incident was also under investigation at press time. NATE HOMAN

BRIEF

Venezuelan scavengers vie with vultures for Brazilian trash

Surrounded by vultures perched on trees awaiting their turn, Venezuelan migrants scrape out a living scavenging for metal, plastic, cardboard and food in a Brazilian border town's rubbish dump.

Trapped in a wasteland limbo, they barely make enough to feed their families and cannot afford a bus ticket to get away and find regular work in Brazilian cities to the south.

They blame leftist President Nicolas Maduro for mismanaging their oil-producing nation's economy and causing the deep crisis that has driven several million Venezuelans to emigrate across Latin America.

"I left because I was dying of hunger. We are trying to get ahead looking through this rubbish. Every night I pray to God to take me out of here," said Rosemary Tovar, a 23-year-old mother from Caracas.

Tens of thousands of Venezuelans have fled the political and economic upheaval in their country through Pacaraima, the only road crossing to Brazil, overloading social services and causing tension in the northern border state of Roraima. More than 40,000 Venezuelans have swollen the population of state capital Boa Vista by 11 percent, Mayor Tereza Surita told Reuters.

The influx has also been a headache for Brazil's new, far-right government of President Jair Bolsonaro, who has so far resisted U.S. pressure to take a more forceful attitude against Maduro. About 3.7 million people have left Venezuela in recent years, mostly via its western neighbor Colombia, according to the World Bank.

A dozen Venezuelans scramble to grab bags of rubbish that tumble from the Pacaraima trash truck twice a day. They then sift through the piles as fetid plumes of smoke rise from the smoldering landfill. Sometimes they scavenge at night using headlamps.

"We are looking for copper and cans, and hopefully something valuable, even food," said Astrid Prado, who is eight months pregnant. "My goal is to get out of here. Nobody wants to spend their life going through garbage." REUTERS

A view of the debris inside Notre-Dame de Paris in the aftermath of a fire that devastated the cathedral.

Gutted but 'valiant,' Notre-Dame still stands

French President Macron hopes to rebuild Notre-Dame in five years.

President Emmanuel Macron pledged on Tuesday that France would rebuild the fire-devastated Notre-Dame de Paris cathedral, saying he hoped the work would be done in five years and the French people would pull together to repair their national symbol.

Macron devoted a brief prime-time televised address to Monday's catastrophic blaze in the heart of the capital, again postponing planned remarks on his response to months of anti-government protests.

"We will rebuild Notre-Dame even more beautifully and I want it to be completed in five years. We can do it," Macron said.

"It is up to us to convert this disaster into an opportunity to come together, having deeply reflected on what we have been and what we have to be and become better than we are. It is up to us to find the thread of our national project.

"This is not a time for politics," added Macron, who had canceled a speech planned on Monday evening on the response to the "yellow vest" protests.

He visited the site of the fire late on Monday and promised then to rebuild the cathedral, parts of which date to the 12th century.

The cathedral spire was destroyed and its roof gutted but the bell towers were still standing and many valuable art works were saved after more than 400 firemen worked to contain the blaze, finally quelling it 14 hours after it began.

As the city and the country grieved for a potent national symbol, billionaires, companies and local authorities were quick to offer donations.

Some 24 hours after the fire started, more than 750 million euros ($845 million) had been pledged, including 500 million from the three billionaire families that own France's giant luxury goods empires: Kering, LVMH and L'Oreal.

Paris public prosecutor Remy Heitz said there was no obvious indication the fire was arson. Fifty people were working on what would be a long and complex investigation, officials said.

"Notre-Dame de Paris is the cathedral of the people, of the people of Paris, of the French people, of the people of the world."

Interior Minister Christophe Castaner

The fire swiftly ripped through the cathedral's oak roof supports, where workmen had been carrying out extensive renovations to the spire's timber-framed supports. Police began questioning the workers involved, the prosecutor's office said.

One firefighter was injured but no one else was hurt, with the fire starting at around

REUTERS

6:30 p.m. after the building was closed to the public for the evening.

Firefighters examined the facade, with its spectacular 10-meter filigreed stained-glass rose window still intact. They could be seen walking atop the belfries as police kept the area on lockdown.

Investigators will not be able to enter the cathedral's blackened nave until experts are satisfied its walls withstood the heat and the building is structurally sound.

"Yesterday we thought the whole cathedral would collapse. Yet this morning she is still standing, valiant, despite everything," said Sister Marie Aimee, a nun who had hurried to a nearby church to pray as the flames spread.

Messages of condolence flooded in from around the world.

Pope Francis, the leader of the Catholic Church, was praying for those affected, the Vatican said, adding: "Notre-Dame will always remain — and we have seen this in these hours — a place where believers and non-believers can come together in the most dramatic moments of French history."

Britain's Queen Elizabeth expressed deep sadness while her son and heir Prince Charles said he was "utterly heartbroken." Chancellor Angela Merkel offered German help to rebuild a part of "our common European heritage."

The interior of the Notre-Dame Cathedral is seen through a doorway following a major fire yesterday. GETTY IMAGES Considered among the finest examples of European Gothic architecture, Notre-Dame is visited by more than 13 million people a year. It sits on an island in the Seine, overlooking the Left Bank hangouts of Ernest Hemingway and Pablo Picasso.

"Notre-Dame de Paris is the cathedral of the people, of the people of Paris, of the French people, of the people of the world. It is part of those references of our history, of what we have in common, of what we share," said Interior Minister Christophe Castaner.

It was at Notre-Dame that Henry VI of England was crowned "King of France" in 1431, that Napoleon was made emperor in 1804, and Pope Pius X beatified Joan of Arc in 1909. Presidents Charles de Gaulle and Francois Mitterrand were mourned there.

The cathedral is owned by the state and has been at the centre of a dispute between the nation and the Paris archdiocese over who should finance restoration work to collapsed balustrades, crumbling gargoyles and cracked facades.

It was too early to estimate the cost of the damage, said the heritage charity Fondation du Patrimoine. REUTERS

US teen girls at risk in dating violence

One in four U.S. teenage girls killed in a homicide is slain by her dating partner: Study.

REUTERS

One in four U.S. teenage girls killed in a homicide is slain by her dating partner, research showed on Monday, exposing details about the "taboo" issue of dating violence among young people.

Teen and adolescent girls are often embarrassed or reluctant to talk about violence, while some schools and parents resist teaching about violent relationships, experts said.

Nine out of 10 teens and adolescents killed by a dating partner are girls, and nine out of 10 of the killers are boys and men, said researchers at the University of Washington. Their report was published in the JAMA Pediatrics medical journal.

"When they are experiencing things they recognize as unhealthy, they're not likely to disclose to adults in their lives," said lead author Avanti Adhia, a senior fellow at the university's medical school.

"By the time kids get to college, it's too late to start teaching about this," she told the Thomson Reuters Foundation.

The research studied more than 2,000 U.S. homicides of children ages 11 to 18.

"When they are experiencing things they recognize as unhealthy, they're not likely to disclose to adults in their lives."

Avanti Adhia, author

It found one-quarter of slain girls were killed by an intimate partner.

A previous study in 2017 by the National Institute of Justice, a U.S. government research agency, found more than two-thirds of teens said they had been in a violent intimate relationship in the previous year.

"There's something so taboo about the topic," said Bersheva Delgado, a community liaison at The Healing Center, a New York nonprofit group that works with abuse survivors.

While some U.S. states allow minors to file legal orders of protection designed to keep abusers away, others require an adult to be present or parental notification that can deter teens from reporting violence, Adhia said.

Most of the female victims were 17 or 18 and their partners typically four years older, the research found.

About two-thirds of the deaths involved guns.

More than one in four deaths were fueled by jealousy, a break-up or resisting a relationship, Adhia said. REUTERS

Church burnings suspect charged with hate crimes

GETTY IMAGES

Three additional charges were lodged against the son of a sheriff's deputy accused of burning down three predominately black churches in southern Louisiana in the past few weeks.

A Louisiana judge added three federal hate crime charges against Holden Matthews, 21, and denied him bond according to multiple media accounts reported, including CBS News.

"Especially painful because it reminds us of a very dark past of intimidation and fear."

Louisiana Gov. John Bel Edwards

Matthews, a white resident of St. Landry Parish, the county where the fires occurred, was previously charged with three counts of arson on religious buildings, officials said.

Matthews entered a plea of not guilty on Monday and remained in custody at the St. Landry Parish jail, media reports said. A judge set a September trial date.

Matthews, the son of Deputy Roy Matthews of the St. Landry Parish Sheriff's Office, was taken into custody last Wednesday.

The three churches destroyed by the fires have mostly black congregations, raising authorities' suspicion that the fires may be racially motivated hate crimes.

Noting the history of burnings of black churches in the South, Louisiana Gov. John Bel Edwards said the episode was "especially painful because it reminds us of a very dark past of intimidation and fear."

The fires set between March 26 and April 4 destroyed St. Mary Baptist Church in Port Barre, and Greater Union Baptist Church and Mount Pleasant Baptist Church in Opelousas.

St. Landry Parish Sheriff Bobby Guidroz said he believed his deputy was unaware of Holden Matthews' involvement in the fires.

Netflix to release Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez doc on May Day

The story of AOC's meteoric rise to political power makes its debut.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez (D-NY), better known as AOC, has captured the attention of fans and foes alike in her ascension to political prominence.

We've seen her dance around the campus at Boston University as an undergraduate; cross-examine Michael Cohen, the former attorney and fixer for President Donald Trump, over the coals on Capitol Hill; and hang out with Desus and Mero on their late-night talk show.

Now, Netflix is planning to release a documentary on AOC's historic ousting of popular incumbent New York Democrat Joe Crowley in the beginning of 2019, making the leap from bartender to legislator in shocking fashion.

On May 1, Netflix will debut "Knock Down the House," which initially screened at the Sundance Film Festival. Sunnysidepost.com said that the documentary sold for a record $10 million in February — the biggest sale of a documentary in the festival's history.

Director Rachel Lears told Sunnyside Post that the platform will allow the film to "reach huge audiences worldwide, including viewers who may not usually watch independent documentaries."

"Knock Down the House" follows three other U.S. congressional figures who emerged onto the progressive political scene by running grassroots campaigns (Amy Vilela in Nevada, Cori Bush in Missouri and Paula Jean Swearengin in West Virginia), according to Paste Magazine. Each came up short in their respective races, but AOC successfully shocked the political landscape.

Currently, Rep. Ocasio-Cortez is the media darling of the Democratic Socialists who lean further left of Nancy Pelosi and Joe Biden on the political spectrum — and the constantly criticized bane of right-wing news networks and editorials. She has championed a Green New Deal and an effort to secure Medicare for all while calling for heavy taxes for high-earners nationwide.

Other outlets have tried to tell the tale of AOC's unprecedented popularity. There are reports from The Daily Beast that the freshman congresswoman was in talks for a book deal that ultimately fizzled out. While the book deal hasn't come to fruition yet, it goes without saying that a sitting House of Representatives member is seldom sought after for publishing rights.

"Knock Down the House" premieres on May 1, which is celebrated as International Worker's Day.

Despite its name, you don't have to master kettlebells to order Kettlebell Kitchen. COURTESY KETTLEBELL KITCHEN

Danielle is like most New Yorkers trying to maintain a consistent health and fitness lifestyle in spite of consistently increasing hours spent at her office.

A 4:30 a.m. alarm kick-starts her day, where it's to the gym by 5:15 to squeeze in a mix of weights and spin which precedes her anything-goes subway commute to work, where the financial executive will spend anywhere from 10 to 12 hours each day.

Despite all healthy intentions, nutrition usually winds up becoming compromised by time constraints. Even with a fridge ambitiously filled with greens and lean proteins and a once-gallant effort at trying meal-prep services — those food subscriptions in which recipes and ingredients are delivered to your door — lunch via meal cart followed by takeout for her take-home dinner is Danielle's daily diet norm.

Now the latest convenient cooking evolution may be a busy professional's best option. Prepared-meal services, in which a variety of diet-friendly dinners are prepared, cooked, then shipped to your apartment are the latest time- and calorie-saving food prep option.

"I remember hauling grocery bags from Trader Joe's to the subway and trying to go through the turnstiles — not a lot of fun, especially when it was bad weather," said Joe Lopez-Gallego, who with his brother Andy launched Kettlebell Kitchen in 2013. "Our service now makes it more convenient and affordable to come up with healthy meal solutions."

A pair of Army vets, the New York-bred bros' motivation behind the combat-to-cooking angle of Kettlebell Kitchen (kettlebellkitchen.com) was blending their two passions — fitness and cooking.

While at West Point, Joe played water polo and was a certified fitness trainer. The brothers recall their days serving in Iraq when the meal options were MREs: "When we were deployed there was no real food provider," Joe said. "I kept thinking, "This is so artificial. Not what we should be eating. There's got to be a better way."

Don't let the name intimidate you, Kettlebell Kitchen wasn't created for flexing meatheads hovering around the squat rack (although you can pick up your KBK order at a host of gyms). Both athletes and financial executives can benefit from prepared-meal delivery services.

KBK — just one of a number of similar services which include Icon Meals and Insainly Fit Meals — can cater to your dietary needs, from keto, low-carb, Paleo, even vegetarian. It's as simple as popping it into a microwave and digging in, all for the cost of a Midtown lunch special.

"It helps ordering a meal in which you know what the ingredients are, designed for your particular goals, and it's gonna be easy and ready," Andy Lopez-Gallego says. "You don't need to waste your time searching for the right meal. Have one ready for you in the refrigerator, at home or at work, eat quickly and get on with your day."

Although meal-prep services have recently become hugely popular — sales are projected to reach $10 billion by 2020 — they require time, which a lot of folks can no longer afford. A recent survey found that Americans on average spend just over a half-hour each day preparing meals and cleaning up.

And not all Americans like to cook: A 2017 study found that just 10 percent of Americans actually enjoy cooking. Just another reason to outsource your meal prep, says motivational speaker Bedros Keuilian.

"We're living in a really great time," Keuilian, the author of "Man Up," says. "I believe in buying speed, and so if I could use a meal-prep company that is already willing to do it and I can pay them, great. … All those little things buy back hours and minutes, and before you know it you've opened up so much time to spend with your family, do personal growth, get your workout in."

As for Danielle, premade meals have immediately changed her midday and post-work diet habits. And all without having to turn on the stove.

"I never knew this kind of stuff existed," she says. "I never have time to cook, and I'm sick of grabbing sandwiches. Taking these to work makes me feel like I'm an athlete."

MADELINE PRESLAND
letters@metro.us

Dining Out for Life is this Thursday, April 18. PROVIDED

If you need an excuse to try a new restaurant this week, the annual Dining Out for Life fundraiser returns this Thursday, April 18. More than 150 restaurants are donating a third of the day's food sales to Action Wellness to support local organizations providing medical and support services for adults and children living with HIV/AIDS. From a quick lunch to a date night destination, here's your guide to Dining Out for Life in Philly.

Fancy Breakfast: High Street on Market
High Street on Market in Old City has a little bit of everything for breakfast lovers. Grab a pastry and coffee to go, or sit down to savor one of their signature breakfast sandwiches. Options include a simple bacon, egg and cheese on brioche ($8), or try The Forager with Swiss cheese, mushroom, kale and black trumpet mayo ($14).
308 Market St., highstreetonmarket.com

Lunch & More: Giuseppe & Sons
Check out the upstairs luncheonette at Giuseppe & Sons in Center City for casual sandwiches, salads and plates of Italian comfort food. Try a vegetable hoagie with eggplant, pesto and mozzarella ($7), or a classic chicken parm plate for $8. The luncheonette also sells pastries from the famous Termini Bros Bakery. Get a freshly piped cannoli, or grab a box of assorted sweets to bring to the office.
1523 Sansom St., giuseppeandsons.com

Happy Hour: Good Dog Bar
Order an extra round for charity during happy hour. Good Dog in Center City is donating 33 percent of both food and beverage sales. Pair a couple of beers with bar snacks like chorizo empanadas ($13) or their daily flatbread special. 224 S. 15th St., gooddogbar.com

Dinner Date: The Love
Make a reservation for a romantic date at The Love in Rittenhouse to try a variety of seasonal American classics. For dinner, sample eight American artisanal cheeses for $20, share a smoke-roasted branzino with golden beets ($38) and save room for desserts like the Dirt Sundae ($11), made with chocolate mousse and homemade cherry candies. The Love is also donating 33 percent of food and beverage sales.

Evil Genius is opening their outdoor beer garden this weekend. PROVIDED

Leis, luaus and lagers

Evil Genius is celebrating the opening of their Beer Garden with a luau extravaganza.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

When the warm weather comes out, so does all of the outside fun the city has to offer — including the ever-popular beer garden venues. Last year Evil Genius opened their wildly popular outdoor beer garden with a bang, but this year they are taking their already impressive spot up a notch and kicking off the opening with an all-out luau bash.

This Friday, April 19, at 5 p.m., Evil Genius will be celebrating the opening of their beer garden with a fun and exciting luau extravaganza. The beach-style party will feature tiki cups for your drinks, grass skirts, coconut bras, music and leis for everyone. Evil Genius' kitchen will also be whipping up tropical fare including barbecue pork tacos with pineapples (3 for $7) all night long.

Guests can chill out and enjoy the unique renderings inspired by the movie "Point Break" starring Patrick Swayze and Keanu Reeves while also sipping on some of the brewing company's best and most flavorful brews. Beverage options include their #adulting (guava IPA), Trust the Process (mosaic and amarillo oat IPA

6.7%), Fly Like an Eagle (watermelon water ice milkshake IPA 6.2%), I Love Lamp (pineapple hefeweizen), They Did Surgery on a Grape (red wine hazy IPA 5.8%) and The Painting Was a Gift, Todd (light lager 4.5%).

Evil Genius founders Luke Bowen and Trevor Hayward wanted the Beer Garden to be extra-special this year, so they decided to upgrade the venue. Last year the duo opened their outdoor Beer Garden on a smaller scale to test out the waters. This year, Bowen and Hayward went all out.

The upgrades to the Beer Garden include a new Evil Genius art mural of the company's logo surrounded by ambient string lights; Goth Hearts from local street and mixed-media artist

The Beer Garden this year also received an upgrade to its seating, with plenty of room to accompany any thirsty Philadelphian. Evil Genius added more wooden bars with barstools, high-top tables, communal tables with bench-style seating, wooden benches, three faux trellises and pergolas, barrel seating, a rocker and more.

The best part? Evil Genius' Beer Garden is also dog-friendly (dog bowls will be available), so even our furry friends can enjoy the magical venue.

"As usual, we'll continue to make very serious beers but with very silly names — but now you have the chance to drink them in a new outdoor oasis in the heart of Kensington. And you can have your dog in tow! The summer is going to have plenty of awesome events including a Low Country boil, a murder mystery, a doggie fashion show and our weekly charity night," said Hayward.

The opening part is free to attend, with beer and food pay-as-you-go.

It's 4:20 somewhere

Philly spots are offering specials with CBD oil to celebrate 4/20.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

4/20 is almost here, and to celebrate a few top spots in Philly are offering delicious specials surrounding the magical naturally occurring compound CBD. CBD is one of the 80-plus active chemicals in marijuana and recently has become a hot commodity in the City of Brotherly Love. Although the extract does not contain the same characteristics as marijuana (no THC, so no psychoactive effects) CBD is said to reduce anxiety, pain and other symptoms of various diseases. Here is where you should go in Philly to take advantage of 4/20.

Saxbys

The hotspot coffee chain teamed up with Little Baby's Ice Cream for the first time ever to offer a sweet treat just for 4/20. Head to any of Saxby's Center City locations this Saturday to try out their enticing CBD infused ice cream bar. The Chai Cold Brew bar is made with a nondairy chai ice cream infused with CBD and encased in a dark Belgian chocolate shell. The delicious flavor was inspired by Saxbys' popular Chai Cold Brew from the brand's signature Cold Brew Collection. The 3.8-ounce bar contains 10mg of CBD per serving and will be sold from 12 p.m.-7 p.m. or while supplies last at $4.99 a bar. But that's not all, Saxbys is celebrating 4/20 (which also happens to be National Cold Brew Day) with CBD infused cold brews as well; Philadelphians can pick up a cup in four flavors: Vanilla Bean, Chai, Sweet Mint and Milk & Honey. The CBD cold brew treats will be offered at the same price as their normal cold brew. Both the ice cream and cold brews are made with Bouquet, a Philadelphia based CBD company from entrepreneur Max Tuttleman. various locations, saxbyscoffee.com

You can add CBD to any Saxbys' cold brew this Saturday. STU GOLDENBERG/SAXBYS

Ardiente

Old City hotspot Ardiente is celebrating 4/20 with a bang. Ardiente's Executive Chef Nihad Hajdarhodzic and Owner Michael Sciore have decided to offer complimentary CBD to all food and drinks by request this Saturday. All Philadelphians have to do is show up, pick their dish or drink and enjoy. Ardiente originally added CBD to their menu back in December and decided to celebrate 4/20 by vamping their CBD options up even more. The complimentary offer will be good beginning at 5 p.m. for Saturday dinner service. 33 S. 2nd St., ardientephilly.com

Fuel

The one-stop healthy shop added CBD infused smoothies to their menu last year, and on 4/20 it would just be a sin not to pick one up. Fuel has three different options of their Dream Smoothies, all three can have CBD added to make them extra special. The smoothies come in three sizes, including 16 oz. ($6.95), 20 oz. ($7.95) and 24 oz. ($8.95). The smoothies are available in three flavors: Green Dream (Vegan and made with kale, ginger, pineapple, spinach, honey and 0.5 ml CBD oil), Berry Dream (Vegan and made with strawberry, mango, apple, banana and 0.5 ml CBD oil) and Orange Dream (vegan option available and made with OJ, banana, vanilla, non-fat yogurt and 0.5 ml CBD oil).Additionally, customers can add a half millimeter of CBD oil to other smoothies for only $2.95. You can also try the oil in other Fuel restaurant's shakes such as the strawberry tahini shake (choice of milk, strawberry, banana, tahini, raw sugar and honey), Iced Avocado Mocha (cold brew iced coffee, avocado, choice of milk and chocolate sauce) and chocolate covered strawberry banana (choice of milk, strawberry, banana, non-fat yogurt and chocolate sauce). various locations, fuelrechargeyourself.com

Sixers rediscover muscle as series shifts to Brooklyn

The 76ers quickly erased their Game 1 dud on Monday night.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Joel Embiid dominated the Nets in just 21 minutes of play in Game 2. GETTY IMAGES

Looking at the big picture, the Brooklyn Nets probably would have been happy getting a split in Philadelphia over the first two games of their first-round playoff series against the 76ers.

In fact, that's exactly what Nets head coach Kenny Atkinson admitted to following the 76ers' blowout win in Game 2, even if there were major reasons for concern.

Monday night provided a reminder that the 76ers are still, in fact, one of the premier sides in basketball, using a monster second half in which they outscored Brooklyn 80-59 to fuel a decisive 145-123 victory that eliminated any good feelings the Nets had following a surprise Game 1 victory.

Philadelphia's starting five provided a strong response from the series-opening dud, returning to form after JJ Redick, Tobias Harris, and Ben Simmons combined for just 18 points in Game 1.

Harris recorded 19 on Monday night while Redick added 17. Simmons added the exclamation point with a triple-double of 18 points, 10 rebounds, and 12 assists — a much-needed bounce back after getting on the Sixers fans for booing the team in Game 1.

"I was thinking about the boos from last game," Simmons said jokingly. "I got a lot of love for this city and the fans here. Every time I step on the floor I try and play as hard as I can, I was just showing that."

It took that much pressure off All-Star center Joel Embiid, who continues to play through knee tendinitis issues as the supporting cast's second-half output allowed head coach Brett Brown to rest the big man for the night.

The Sixers led by just one at halftime before putting up 51 points in the third quarter, tied for the most in a quarter in NBA playoff history.

"Coach really got into us," Harris said. "It was

PA sportsbooks have best month yet

The month of March set sports betting records in the state.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

GETTY IMAGES

Pennsylvania had its best stretch yet in terms of handle (total amount of money wagered) and revenue generated in the month of March.

Buoyed by March Madness, traditionally one of most wagered-on events on the sports calendar in the United States, the statewide total handle was a record $44.52 million with a record $5.51 million in revenue.

March eclipsed the February numbers easily ($31.5 million handle), and also toppled the numbers from January ($32 million handle). The January totals were lifted by the NFL playoffs, in which the in-state Philadelphia Eagles played two games.

Rivers Casino in Pittsburgh continued to lead the way in the state in March as it has been boosted by not having any competition out west. The retail sports betting scene in Philadelphia is much more jumbled, with six locations within a 45-minute drive of the city.

Here is the breakdown for the month of March by handle and revenue.

Handle

Rivers $11.9 million

SugarHouse $9.2 mill

Parx Casino $7.9 mill

Penn National $5.3 mill

Harrah's $3.7 mill

Turf Club $3.5 mill

Valley Forge CR $2.04 mill

Valley Forge RS $706K

New York Mets at Philadelphia Phillies

The Mets have posted a perfect 4-0 record to the Over in their last four Game 3s of a series and they are 5-1-1 to the Over in their last seven versus a right-handed starter. They have also gone up and over the number in six of Zack Wheeler's last seven road starts and they are an impressive 8-1-1 to the Over in their last 10 road games. The Phillies have been an Over team as well in the spot they are in here tonight, as they have gone 5-1 to the Over in their last six versus an NL East division rival and they are 5-1 to the Over in their last six versus a righty starter. Throw in the fact that these two teams are 6-2-1 to the Over in their last nine overall and that's where we'll have our play.

Sports betting 101:
How to bet on basketball

VSiN

The NBA playoffs have finally arrived and the hometown Sixers are looking to play deep into May, if not June.

Some of you may be betting on basketball for the first time, and we at MetroBet are here to help. Here is a beginner's guide to betting on hoops.

* For your first time, your best bet is to bet on the spread of the game. Here is an example of a typical NBA basketball spread:
Brooklyn +8.5 (-109)
Philadelphia -8.5 (–109)

* The -8.5 indicates that Philadelphia is favored to win by 8.5 points or more. If you bet $109 on the Sixers to win by 8.5 points or more, you would win $100. If you bet on Brooklyn, the underdog here, you would need them to win the game outright or lose by 8.5 points or fewer to win.

* Totals or "over-unders" is another popular basketball bet. Essentially, you bet on whether or not you think the two teams will combine to score more or less than the total the sportsbook puts out. For instance, in the last game between the Nets and Sixers, the over-under was set at 223. The final score was 76ers 123, Nets 110 — which, combined, was 233. If you bet the over in this high-scoring affair, you went home a winner. MATT BURKE

Betting breakdown of the NBA playoffs

GETTY IMAGES

It might have been the most impressive defensive performance basketball bettors will see in the 2019 NBA Playoffs.

Sunday, in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference opening-round series featuring the Boston Celtics and the Indiana Pacers, the hosts limited the visitors to 74 points on 96 possessions.

Among the highlights:

Boston held Indiana to 39 percent on 2-point shots

Boston held Indiana to 22 percent on 3-point shots

Boston grabbed 48 defensive rebounds

Within a four-quarter flurry of misfired shots, the Pacers could only grab nine offensive rebounds. That means the Celtics snared 84 percent of available boards on that side of the floor. Defensive rebounds are virtual "steals" because they end the opposing offense's possession.

Boston (-7) build a lead as big as 22 points (84-62) before relaxing in garbage time to cover the spread in an 84-74 victory. The scoring sum stayed below its market Over/Under of 210 by 52 points!

Betting markets have adjusted for Wednesday's second meeting. The Celtics opened at -7.5. The Over/Under opened as low as 202.5 at some Las Vegas sports books.

Have they adjusted enough? Or will the Celtics take their foot off the defensive gas because of overconfidence? Picking point spread winners is rarely easy in the playoffs.

Jeff Fogle writes for the Vegas Stats & Information Network.

Stanley Cup playoffs
Wednesday betting preview

Bruins at Maple Leafs
Puckline: Bruins +1.5 goals (-275), Maple Leafs -1.5 goals (+230)
Betting Total: 6.0 goals (Over +105, Under -125)

The Maple Leafs wrested an oft-important 2-1 series lead from the Bruins on Monday, and they'll go for a 3-1 stranglehold against their division rival on Wednesday. Toronto was both faster and stronger than Boston in Game 3, outhitting the Bruins 42-33 en route to a 3-2 victory at Scotiabank Arena.

Frederik Andersen has been tough for the Bruins to solve, as he has a .939 save percentage through three games of this series. Assuming he continues his solid play, Toronto should emerge with a Game 4 triumph.
The play: Maple Leafs moneyline

Nashville Predators at Dallas Stars
Puckline: Predators +1.5 goals (-310), Stars -1.5 goals (+260)
Betting Total: 5.0 goals (Over +105, Under -125)

This quarterfinal series between the Predators and Stars has revolved around goaltenders Pekka Rinne and Ben Bishop, and it was Rinne that stood on his head and made 40 saves in Game 3 to secure a 3-2 win for his club.

The 42 shots Nashville surrendered in Game 3 seems like a fluke occurrence based on their regular-season average of 30 shots against per game, ninth in the league. Dallas' offense averaged just 30.7 shots per game in the regular year, just 20th in the NHL.
The play: Predators moneyline

Ben Simmons recorded a triple-double in the Sixers' Game 2 victory over the Nets on Monday night. GETTY IMAGES fiery."

"Yeah, he came in here and said a few cuss words. Shocked me a little bit, to tell you the truth," Jimmy Butler, who was held to just seven points, said. "But I like it. That's the type of energy I love. Just make sure everybody did their job, letting them know you can't have it — it's not winning basketball."

In just 21 minutes of play, Embiid was still unstoppable with 23 points and 10 rebounds, further exposing Brooklyn's inability to control play near the basket.

For Brown, it's a dangerous game to play with the health of his star, but he believes that he's mastered the art of utilizing the 25-year-old.

"Let's face it, it's not ideal, but I have been used to his and whatever it takes with Joel in relation to his health, I'm so far past the anxiety of getting information late," Brown said as Embiid was a game-time decision in Game 1. "I'm numb to it. I'm past it... This is just the path we're on with Joel. There's zero doubt he's our crown jewel."

With Jared Dudley out injured with a strained calf and Ed Davis playing through a sprained ankle on Monday night, second-year center Jarrett Allen was constantly bullied down low by Embiid — including a nasty elbow to the side of the head that saw the Sixers star hit with a flagrant 1 foul. He was lucky not to be thrown out of the game.

"Yeah, he came in here and said a few cuss words. Shocked me a little bit, to tell you the truth. But I like it. That's the type of energy I love. Just make sure everybody did their job..."

Embiid, Simmons, and reserve center Boban Marjanovic combined for 28 rebounds alone on the night, just four fewer than the Nets had as a team. Philadelphia outrebounded Brooklyn 49-32 on the night and outscored the Nets 62-48 in the paint, which was a big issue for Nets head coach Kenny Atkinson.

"They dominated us in the paint, dominated on the boards," Atkinson said. "As a team, we did not rebound. The first team did not rebound. And we've got to pick that up. If we don't find a solution to our rebounding woes, it's going to be over quick. It's on Jarrett to pick it up, and it's on the rest of those guys, too."

While the Nets were taken advantage of in the paint, their outside shooting went ice cold.

After hitting 10 three's in the first half, they hit just five the rest of the night as the Sixers keyed in on the long-range sniper, Joe Harris, all game. The 2019 NBA three-point contest champion was limited to just four attempts from beyond the arc in Game 2, hitting just one.

"Credit to them, they did a good job denying Joe," Nets star guard D'Angelo Russell said (h/t New York Post). "We definitely need him to go for us to go. We'll look at the film, see what we can do."

Russell was held to 16 points on the night on 3-of-7 shooting from three-point range — the same mark as Spencer Dinwiddie, who recorded a team-high 19 in the loss.

For Atkinson and the Nets, it's simply time to flip the page and focus on gaining some momentum back home in Brooklyn for Game 3 on Thursday night.

"One bad quarter, we're going to have to flush it and understand, one thing about the Brooklyn Nets this season, they've always bounced back and always responded after a game like this," Atkinson said. "I expect our guys to respond."
